The Poakhali police on Tuesday sent a dealer of fake diesel to judicial custody after registering an FIR. According to Police Station Iqbal Ahmed Khan, on his instructions, after a tip-off, the police recovered 200 liters of fake diesel from a person named Shahnawaz, a resident of Panjipara in West Bengal near Khanabari village and after which he was arrested. The density of the seized diesel has been found to be much less than the standard. It is worth noting that on July 31 last year, a businessman was arrested and sent to jail by the Poakhali police with 400 liters of fake diesel. Which confirms that the business of spurious diesel petrol is openly going on a large scale in the surrounding areas including Pauaakhali. Often, traders can be seen hurling hundreds of liters of diesel petrol in gallons loaded on motorcycles, which are supplied by fuel pumps to retailers in rural haat markets.
