

Delhi Crime Branch busts gang manufacturing spurious lubricating engine oil, 7

arrested

Delhi Police Crime Branch busted a gang that was manufacturing and selling spurious lubricating engine oil and arrested 7 people. The owner of the factory was earlier working in a oil company and had learnt about the trade of duplicate lubricants there.

The Delhi Police Crime Branch busted a gang that was producing and selling spurious lubricating engine oil. Seven people, including the owner of the factory where the spurious oil was manufactured, have been arrested. The factory owner worked in an oil company previously and had learnt about the trade when he was employed there.

In view of the recent incidents of the sale of spurious lubricating engine oil in the Delhi-NCR area's open retail market, a team was formed by the Crime Branch, Delhi.

Crime Branch official, Anuj, received a tip-off about one such unit in Delhi's Khera Khurd village. He developed the same lead and located the premises of the factory where the oil was manufactured.

The team conducted a raid and apprehended 37-year-old Vivek Tyagi, the owner of the factory. Six others, Monu Kumar, Kamal, Gautam, Rajesh, Anil Kumar and Satyendra Kumar, were also arrested.

Counterfeit engine oil bottles, packing material, including bottles, stickers, cartons, label strips, and a drum containing spurious engine oil were recovered from the said premises.
